Pursuit of Health Equity through Social Justice, Human Rights and Community Activism

“Social determinants...the major forces that shape the health outcomes of people and communities.”

Join us to learn about the interrelatedness of personal health behavior, social determinants, structural inequities, institutionalized racism, and their impact on health disparities. Through interdisciplinary and cross-sector collaboration we can begin to address barriers towards health equity. Not to be missed!

Thursday, May 29, 2014 from 12PM to 2PM
Mark Twain House & Convention Center, Lincoln Financial Auditorium
351 Farmington Ave., Hartford, CT

Dr. Adewale Troutman has dedicated over 40 years to the principles of universal freedoms and the elimination of racism, injustice and oppression. Dr. Troutman has an MD, a Masters in Public Health, and a Masters in Black Studies. His career has included clinical emergency medicine, hospital administration, academic and public health practice. He directed the Metro Louisville Department of Public Health and Wellness.

Dr. Troutman's commitment to social justice, human rights, and community activism has led to nationally recognized efforts to create health equity and the supremacy of social determinants of health, including founding of the first Center for Health Equity. Dr. Troutman has had multiple publications including "What if We Were Equal", co-authored with former Surgeon General and Assistant Secretary of Health, Dr. David Satcher. He is featured in the nationally televised PBS series, Unnatural Causes; Is Inequality Making Us Sick?
